A Note from the Playwright-in-Residence

Welcome to the Seventh Biennial Festival of New American Plays. We are proud to present exciting new works by our guest playwrights Barbara Lebow and James McLure. The plays you are about to see performed are presented as "staged readings." Professional theatres and producers use such readings in order to involve audiences and actors in the process of new play development. Plays are meant to be performed, and the best way to see whether a new play works is to present it in front of a live audience. This is where you come in—and we thank you for being here!

Each play in the festival has had only ten rehearsals. The actors will be performing with the script in their hands, relying on their talent and training to interpret the text without the advantage of a long rehearsal process. These readings have been designed to concentrate on the words of the playwrights and the talents of our young performers and designers. We have included a minimal amount of scenery, costumes and lights to give the writers what they envisioned in their scripts. We are attempting to present the world of the play as closely as possible to what the author has written. The results may be a different type of theatre from what you are accustomed to seeing. Our hope is that you will find this event both adventurous and exciting.

One of my goals when we started the festival in 1998 was to bring established writers to our campus to work with our students. We have always asked our invited playwrights to send us any script they wished to hear and, in return, we have promised to give them our best interpretation of the text. Another goal has been to give audiences in Nacogdoches the unique opportunity to see new plays while they are being created. Our first six festivals were great successes. Now with this seventh festival, I hope the community will once again enjoy this celebration of "new theatre in the making."

I wish to thank the faculty and staff of the School of Theatre. My special thanks to Professor Scott Shattuck, for his guidance and for directing one of the evenings, and to Juanita Finkenberg, for her help with the movement. I commend the cast, designers and crew for the work they have done. Watching these young theatre artists learn and grow is the primary reason we are here. Finally, to Ms. Lebow and Mr. McLure—thank you for trusting us with your plays and for coming to visit our campus. You inspire us with your words and astound us with your generosity. We dedicate this evening to you.

Barbara Lebow, a Santa Barbara resident, was born in New York and moved to Atlanta in the 1960s, eventually becoming playwright-in-residence at Academy Theatre. Among her plays there are A Shayna Maidel, The Left Hand Singing, Cyparis, The Keepers, Trains, Little Joe Monaghan, Tiny Tim is Dead, and several plays for young audiences. Theatres producing her work include Alabama Shakespeare Festival, Hartford Stage Company, Jean Cocteau Repertory Theatre, Philadelphia Theatre Company, the Berkshire Theatre Festival and Ensemble Theatre of Santa Barbara. A Shayna Maidel (Off-Broadway 1987-89) continues receiving regional and international productions. Its adaptation received a Best Picture Emmy in 1992. In addition to her own writing, Barbara facilitates play creation with disenfranchised segments of the population. Most recently, she worked with residents of Los Prietos Boys Camp, supported by a grant from the Fund for Santa Barbara. She has received a Guggenheim Fellowship in Playwriting, a TCG/Pew Theatre Artists Residency, an NEA/TCG Residency, an Atlanta Mayor's Fellowship in the Arts, a Georgia Governor's Award in the Arts, and a Distinguished Service Award from the Santa Barbara County Probation Department. She was recently a Michael Douglas Distinguished Visiting Artist at the University of California at Santa Barbara. Her recent plays include La Niñera: The Nursemaid, The Phenom, and Plumfield, Iraq.
