A Note from the Director

Godspell began as a graduate school project for John-Michael Tebelak at Carnegie Mellon University; it was revised by Stephen Schwartz (who was later to write Pippin and Wicked) before opening under Tebelak's direction at the famous Café La Mama in May of 1971. It played over 2,000 performances off-Broadway and over 500 on Broadway, where it moved in 1976. There was also a film version, released in 1973.

Whereas Schwartz wrote almost all of the music ("By My Side" is an exception), many of the lyrics come from earlier sources: Godspell draws from poems, hymns and songs from the 13th, 18th, 19th, and early 20th centuries—and that doesn't count Psalm 137 ("On the Willows") or the Prologue, which cites a host of texts ranging in time from Plato's Apology (399 BC) to Buckminster Fuller's "I Am a Verb" in 1970.

The play draws much of its material—the Son of Man trope, the extensive use of parables, the overall tone—from the Book of Matthew, but all four Gospels are referenced in one way or another. Indeed, two of the best-known parables presented here—the prodigal son and the good Samaritan—appear only in Luke.

Ultimately, this is a play about the formation of a community based on love, acceptance and forgiveness. It is thus at least as much about the group's ability to spread the "Godspell" (the title comes from the Old English spelling of "gospel," or "good news") as about Jesus per se. Any community relies on mutual support—as Bob Dylan wrote, "may you always do for others, and let others do for you." This production has relied on more contributors than can be enumerated here: the usual complement of literally dozens of actual company members, but also family, friends and colleagues who suggested an idea, helped with foreign language pronunciation or dialects, etc. Still, I would be remiss if I did not offer special thanks to my friend and former student, the Rev. Scott Nesbitt. If the theological interpretations of this production are coherent and supportable, it is thanks to him. If they are not, the fault is entirely mine.

A Note from the Director

When the great German theatre artist Bertolt Brecht unified the idea for Epic Theatre in the early to mid-20th century, he was probably not expecting a production of the children's novel Charlotte's Web to find its retelling in this style. Yet many of the theatrical techniques we discovered in rehearsal to tell this story find their roots in Epic Theatre. Techniques such as breaking the fourth wall (actors speaking directly to the audience), actors playing multiple characters, live music on stage and even some of the audience being lit are all attributes that relate to Epic Theatre. And why not? Epic Theatre was invented to tell the stories that encompassed themes of morality, love, loss and true friendship. Charlotte's Web embraces all these ideas and is a tale (like those of Shakespeare) that finds itself being restaged every year all around the world.

We are honored to share with you our interpretation of this classic tale of children's theatre. What may seem like the simple story of a "spring pig" is in fact an epic tale about life's journey and our search for compassion, love and understanding in a world often ruled by routine, ignorance and selfishness. Through Charlotte, we see how one simple action can set off a series of events that can make all beings assess their own actions and move forward on a more positive path. Epic ideas!

The audience is the most important part of any production, and in the style of Epic Theatre, we encourage you, our audience, to not feel that you have to sit quietly as you watch. We encourage you to respond to the questions the actors ask you on stage, to sing along with the songs and to cheer for Wilbur when he is winning and grieve with him when he is losing.

Finally, I would like to thank everyone who helped bring this story to the stage, especially our team of designers and technical team for their hard work and ideas; Jason Scott for his musical talents, positive feedback and great laugh; Professor Scott Shattuck for giving me the honor to direct this story; Allison Day for reminding us all what true courage is; and all the students who have worked tirelessly backstage and onstage with deep commitment for the love of storytelling, for the love of the play, and for the love of the audience and each other.

Enjoy the show.

His work in industrials/theme parks include Showtime, Miller Beer, American Brands, Pizza Hut, Opryland, Silver Dollar City and Dollywood where he designed shows for eight years. He has taught at Lehman College, Queens College and the University of Tulsa. He has also designed national tours of Dreamgirls and The Peking Circus, and several traveling old fashioned "melodramers." He is a graduate of NYU's Tisch School of the Arts design program and the University of Tulsa theatre program, and is a member of United Scenic Artists Local 829.

RICK JONES is a professor of theatre at SFA and was the recipient of the Teaching Excellence Award for the College of Fine Arts in 2007. He has worked as an actor, director, dialect coach, dramaturg and translator in seven states and two foreign countries. His most recent SFA directing credits include The Madwoman of Chaillot, Three Sisters, The Uninvited, The Breasts of Tiresias, Woyzeck, "Master Harold"...and the boys and As You Like It.

LAURA RIKARD is an assistant professor of theatre at SFA and coordinator of the School of Theatre's BFA program, and she made her Mainstage debut as movement director and cast member for last season's bobrauschenbergamerica. She earned her BA from the College of Charleston and master's degrees from the Liverpool Institute of the Arts and the University of Virginia. She has directed for LIVE Arts Theatre, New Perspectives Theatre, Henley Street Theatre and the University of Virginia. She has taught acting, movement, mask and theatre to youth in England, New York City and various universities, colleges and theatres in the United States. She has had the honor to work with Steven Spielberg, Nora Ephron, Daniel Day-Lewis, Sally Field, Julia Louis-Dreyfus and Meryl Streep. Rikard is a member of SAG/AFTRA and was awarded the Best Acting Award at the 2011 Virginia Film Festival. Her most recent performance was in Last Train to Nibroc at the Piccolo Spoleto Festival this past May in Charleston, S.C.

About the Production Team

HEATHER SAMUELSON is a graduate of Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, Texas. She has performed with recognized choreographers and dance companies such as Joy Kellman, The Paul Taylor II Company, Wes Chapman (director of ABT II), the Kista Tucker Dance Company, Rednerrus Feil Dance Company, Raven Dance Project and Dance Umbrella. She received her MFA in dance in 2009 and has been a member of the Stephen F. Austin dance faculty since. While at SFA, Heather has been a guest speaker for the Faith and Trauma Seminar. In 2011 she received the honor of the prestigious Instructors with the Top 10 Most Life Changing Courses for her Choreography class. She has taught master classes at the American College Dance Festival (ACDFA) South Central Conference and has had her choreography adjudicated at ACDFA, as well. Heather also choreographs for the SFA Opera, and since 2011 she has been the choreographer for the Tyler Junior College Harmony and Understanding Show Choir, whose performance schedule includes local and national venues including the Kennedy Center. She has had the pleasure of being a guest artist, this past spring, for the Houston Community College Dance Company, where she set her Limon-based modern piece, Broken Darkness. This summer, in addition to her work on Godspell, she will be constructing a Christmas Pops Concert for the TJC Show Choir.

JASON DAVIDS SCOTT will relocate to Arizona this fall, where he will begin teaching in the School of Film, Theatre and Dance at Arizona State University. At SFA, he directed the Mainstage show bobrauschenbergamerica and last year's Summer Rep production Steel Magnolias, as well as four original productions with the (New) Original Cast and the debut production of the Fredonia Players (The Yellow Brick Road Show). He also directed the staged reading of the new play Spark. Other shows where he has appeared both as a performer and musician include SFA's Three Sisters, Shakespeare Santa Barbara's Much Ado About Nothing and Comedy of Errors, and Site Pacific's Santa Barbara production of Twelfth Night.

TYLER STAMPE from Jefferson, Iowa, is a recent graduate of Stephen F. Austin State University, where he earned a Master of Music degree. He received his Bachelor of Music Education from Simpson College in Indianola, Iowa. His compositions include 'Tis Better to Give - a children's opera adapted from the story "The Gift of the Magi"; 4 Images for Saxophone, and Nocturne for Trumpet. Last year, he served as the musical director for the School of Theatre for the summer musical production How I Became a Pirate. Tyler will attend the University of Georgia to begin work on his DMA in composition in the fall of 2013. His composition teachers include Stephen Lias and Michael Patterson.
