Dramatuturgical Research for the 2017 Production of Tartuffe

Research by Marie Phillips

INTRODUCTION

To give the cast a wider understanding of their characters and the show as a whole, I wrote six packets: a glossary of the script, a guide to understanding the use of language in the play, production history, a biography of Molière, a biography of the translator (Richard Wilbur), and “Life in Seventeenth Century France”.

FUN FACTS

- Tartuffe first premiered at a royal festival called The Pleasures of the Enchanted in May 1664.
- After its initial viewing, the French Academy banned the play until 1669.
- The play was written in alexandrines, but Richard Wilbur wrote his translation in heroic couplets.
- Orgon and his family were a part of the bourgeoisie, which was the rising upper middle class in 17th century France.

AFTER THE SHOW

After one of the performances, I had the opportunity to work with Dr. Joyce Johnston in hosting a reception. This event featured presentations from several of her French students. In addition, Dr. Johnston herself gave a presentation on Lady Tartuffe by Delphine de Girardin.

---

FUN FACTS

- The role of Mme. Pernelle was originally played by a man named André Hubert.
- In 1960, Richard Wilbur moved to Houston and worked with the Alley Theatre.
- By law in 17th century France, all plays were limited to a 24-hour time span, one location, and no subplots.
- Molière died shortly after a performance of his last play, The Imaginary Invalid, in which he was playing the lead.

Special Thanks to Faculty Sponsor Prof. Scott Shattuck