2012 Undergraduate Research Conference: Celebrating Academic Diversity

Stephen F. Austin State University has adopted "High-Impact Practices to Enhance Student Learning" as our Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP). High-impact practices incorporated into course content engages students in learning, which improves higher-order thinking skills and overall student success. Undergraduate research, which often includes field-based learning, are high-impact practices adopted by SFA.

ORSP is committed to supporting and promoting opportunities for undergraduate research at SFA. Visit our (new and improved!) website for a list of opportunities from programs to scholarships to publication venues.

Student interest in STEM careers after participating in undergraduate research opportunities (sciencemag.org).

Last year, research grants awarded to SFA faculty and staff included more than $210,000 for students. These funds provided opportunities for students to conduct research, perform field work, serve as technicians, and travel to meetings to present papers, all while earning their undergraduate degrees at SFA in a variety of majors.

To learn more about how faculty can be mentors to students, and how students can find faculty members willing to support their academic interests, visit SFA's new Undergraduate Research page today.

Undergraduate Research at SFASU

Each year SFA holds the Undergraduate Research Conference to celebrate the academic achievements and scholarly excellence of its undergraduate students. This year's conference showcases student projects completed across SFA's six colleges and regional colleges over the previous academic year.

Any paper or project composed or performed during the previous calendar year (in this case, 2011) as part of an undergraduate course requirement or as a faculty-supervised independent project was eligible for the competition.
