SUMMERTIME IS PLAY TIME AT SFA!

"Master Harold" ...and the boys

SCHOOLHOUSE ROCK LIVE! TOO

W.M. TURNER AUDITORIUM & DOWNSTAGE THEATRE
GRIFFITH FINE ARTS BUILDING
Stephen F. Austin State University

June 26 through July 18, 2009
A LETTER FROM THE PRODUCER

Welcome to the SFA School of Theatre’s Summer Repertory season for 2009. Whichever show you’re seeing today, I hope you will come back for our other two offerings. We’ve got three productions that couldn’t be more different—something for everyone, and a rewarding rainbow of theatrical colors to brighten your summertime—your PLAY time.

“Master Harold”... and the boys is one of the most poignant plays of its time, but it also brims with humor, vibrancy and love. Winner of the coveted Drama Desk Award for Outstanding New Play, among other honors, it is considered by many to be the finest work of the great South African author Athol Fugard. Although it evokes a time of terrible oppression, its story confirms the essential nature of friendship, nurturing, and respect. A new film version of this enduring script is due out in 2010.

Maybe you grew up with Schoolhouse Rock on Saturday mornings, as I did. Maybe you heard your kids rocking out to its delightful musical lessons as you ate your cornflakes in the 1970s. Or maybe you’ve wondered why your mom or dad spontaneously starts humming “Conjunction Junction, what’s your function?” every so often. Whatever your connection to these irresistibly entertaining cartoon classes on grammar and math, civics and science, it’s time to get your kids, your grandkids, your nieces and nephews or your little brothers and sisters in on the fun at Schoolhouse Rock Live! Too. They’ll be dancing in the aisles so happily they won’t even notice how much they’re learning!

Picnic is a bona-fide American classic. William Inge’s Pulitzer Prize-winning portrait of heartland hearts in summer is as candid and compassionate a depiction of passions surging and passions crushed, of youth dissolving and youth triumphant, as our theatre has yet produced. Paul Newman’s Broadway debut also became a classic film that was nominated for a Best Picture Oscar. Lean back and relax—you’ll almost smell the freshly mown grass in the small-town Kansas air.

These last two productions are bittersweet for us all, too, as they feature the final two sets our mentor and guiding spirit, Tomy Matthys, has designed before his retirement this summer after more than four decades of service to the performing arts at SFA. Tomy’s astonishing energy, creativity, skill and boundless love through all of those years have made all of our work here possible, and we will never be able to thank him enough, but we’re giving it our best shot all summer long as we gratefully dedicate this entire season to him.

Thanks again for joining us. Enjoy your summertime—your PLAY time here at SFA.

--Scott Shattuck
Director, SFA School of Theatre

The tenure of Thomas Martin Matthys on the faculty of Stephen F. Austin State University encompasses the history of the College of Fine Arts and the School of Theatre. From the founding of the then-named School of Fine Arts in 1965, through the creation of a separate Department of Theatre in 1971, to the current School of Theatre, his academic and artistic contributions have been fundamental to the growth and development of the theatre programs at SFA. Thank you, Tomy. And break a leg!

DIRECTOR'S NOTE

I've taught "Master Harold"...and the boys in Play Analysis class every fall since coming to SFA in 2001, and I knew there were autobiographical elements, but I never realized how many until starting research for this production. Athol Fugard's given name is Harold, and he was called Hally as a youth; he would have been 17 years old in 1950; his mother ran a tea shop in Port Elizabeth, South Africa, staffed by two black men named Sam Semela and Willie Malopo. Even Hally's vitriolic outburst near the end of the play actually happened (although Fugard was considerably younger than Hally is in the play).

In a very real sense, then, Hally's quest for a "social reformer" in his own age might reasonably have led him to a mirror. Hally certainly has some growing up to do, but the adult Fugard, by keeping the spotlight on the intrinsic inhumanity of apartheid when both journalists and statesmen abrogated their responsibility to do so, was probably as responsible as any white man for the overthrow of that horrific system in 1994.

But while this gives "Master Harold" some stature as a historical artifact, it isn't a reason to produce the play today. That rationale comes in the characters and their relationships, in the struggle of an adolescent boy to cope with the ramifications of a situation he didn't create, in the portrayal of the simple fact that we lash out primarily against those we love the most, in the indomitability of the human spirit which can find joy even in the darkest hours. Above all, it is a play which reminds us, in Sam's words, that we can choose to walk away from that bench, whatever evil or injustice it might represent at a particular time and place.

ABOUT THE PLAYWRIGHT

Harold Athol Lanigan Fugard (1932- ) is a South African playwright, actor, director, and novelist. He has attained international fame for his plays that critique politics and the society that surrounded him while growing up and living in South Africa.

Fugard first began to see the injustices of apartheid when he went to Johannesburg in 1958 to work as a clerk in a "Native Commissioners' Court." Deciding to take a more overt stand on the issue, he organized a multiracial theatre, working closely with his friend, black South African actor Zakes Mokae. However, this brought him into conflict with the national government. Watched by the secret police, his passport confiscated for a time, Fugard was forced to have his plays produced and published outside of his own country in order to avoid prosecution. Among Fugard's 31 plays are: The Blood Knot, Sizwe Bansi Is Dead, My Children! My Africa!, and The Island. He has been nominated six times for Broadway's Tony Award, for playwriting and directing. Fugard's plays and novels have also been adapted to film. Fugard currently lives with his wife in California and is an adjunct professor of theatre at the University of California, San Diego. He still maintains a residence in South Africa.

Schoolhouse Rock was never a conventional children's TV program, on the order of Sesame Street or The Electric Company, but rather a series of 3-minute educational cartoons set to simple rock melodies which were aired occasionally during other Saturday morning programs on ABC-TV from 1973 to 2001. ABC convinced producers to cut their programs' run times by three minutes in order to allow an individual Schoolhouse Rock song to be inserted, much like a public service announcement. These songs taught children concepts ranging from math to grammar to history, politics, science, biology, computers, and even economics. The catchy spots were so popular they spawned record albums and CDs, DVD collections and live-action stage revues. Schoolhouse Rock Live! Too was the second such revue.
