YOU'RE A GOOD MAN, CHARLIE BROWN

LAND OF THE DRAGON

1918

TURNER AUDITORIUM, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS CENTER
Stephen F. Austin State University

July 2 through July 19, 2003
A LETTER FROM THE PRODUCER

I would like to take this opportunity to welcome you to our summer season of family entertainment. These three productions (You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown, The Land of the Dragon, and 1918) are multi-generational. They appeal to old and young alike. As children of all ages we come together to exercise our powers of empathy and human sympathy and to extend our emotional range by understanding the experiences of others.

Whether watching a young couple in Texas during the World War I influenza epidemic struggle to begin a life together; or the story of a princess hidden away by her scheming aunt; or the wonderful world of Charles Schulz and his gang of characters, our imaginations will be stretched, our minds challenged, and our feelings touched. We are delighted that you have joined us in the adventure of live theatre.

From our family to yours--

Clarence W. Bahs, Chair
Department of Theatre
SFA

ABOUT THE PLAY

When Charles M. Schulz's (1922-2000) comic strip Peanuts made its debut on October 2, 1950, it ran in just seven newspapers. By 1984, it was seen in a record-breaking 2,000 papers worldwide. Its gentle humor and deceptively simple artwork cloaked an entire world of adult sensibility and wry outlook. Here are some of Schulz's observations on his creation:

- "Generally, [Charlie Brown] is wholly struck down by the remarks of the other characters, especially Lucy. She represents all of the cold-blooded, self-sufficient people in this world who do not feel that it is at all necessary ever to say anything kind about anyone."
- "Snoopy's not a real dog, of course--he's an image of what people would like a dog to be."
- "The supposedly weak people in the world are funny when they dominate the supposedly strong people. There is nothing funny about a little boy being mean to a little girl. That is simply not funny! But there is something funny about a little girl being mean to a little boy."
- "I have never drawn the kids from an adult viewpoint, looking down on them."
- "[All] the loves in the strip are unrequited; all the baseball games are lost; all the test scores are D-minuses; the Great Pumpkin never comes; and the football is always pulled away."

Schulz officially retired in 1999. The last new Peanuts strip ran on February 13, 2000. But Schulz himself was not there to see it; he had died of colon cancer the night before.

Reruns of the strip are still published everywhere—including in the Daily Sentinel.

ABOUT THE PLAY

To say that this production combines an assortment of styles is to err on the side of understatement. The script claims to be based on the style of Chinese theatre. It is, but there are a host of other influences as well: not least the Japanese forms of kyōgen and kabuki (the fact that the play was written at the end of World War II, when the Chinese were allies and the Japanese were enemies, probably accounts for the reluctance to acknowledge Japanese elements). We have played up some of these aspects, minimized others, and added material from other Asian traditions, from Russian nonrealism, and from American vaudeville, film and live radio. But this all sounds far more academic than it ought to: we really just want to tell this charming and often humorous story, and to spread a little fun in the process.

ABOUT THE PLAYWRIGHT

Madge Miller was born in Pittsburgh in 1918, and received degrees from the Pennsylvania College for Women and the Case School of Applied Science. A schoolteacher and subsequently playwright and director of the Knickerty-Knocketry Players in Pittsburgh for twenty-one years, she was one of the first wave of important American playwrights of theatre for children. An advocate of fantasy and fairy-tale themes, Miller claims she wrote "to create a real world of make-believe from which the child can gain a better understanding of the sometimes unbelievable world of reality." The Land of the Dragon (1945) was her first play to be performed and published, and it remains one of her most popular works. She wrote over twenty plays, roughly half of them alone and half with her partner Larry Villani. Apart from Land of the Dragon, she is probably best known for The Unwicked Witch: An Unlikely Tale, and OPQRS, Etc., and for stage adaptations of such classic stories as The Pied Piper of Hamelin, Alice in Wonderland, and Snow White and Rose Red.

The Time and Place
The action of the play takes place in Harrison, Texas, during 1918.

Scene 1: Harrison Cemetery, late afternoon
Scene 2: Robedaux home, early evening
Scene 3: The same, a few weeks later
Scene 4: The same, four months later

Scene 6: Robedaux home, a short time later

ABOUT THE PLAY
1918 is the seventh of Horton Foote's highly acclaimed roundelay of nine plays, The Orphan's Home Cycle, which covers the first three decades of this past century and is loosely based on Foote's boyhood, family, and neighbors in Wharton, Texas. Each play is a complete drama in its own right.

Set during the height of World War I and the devastating influenza epidemic, 1918 focuses on the Robedaux' and Vaughns' survival and struggle to keep their dreams afloat in a rising tide of changing times.

In an interview discussing the themes of his work, Foote said, "I suppose you'd have to say I'm attracted to survivors. I'm a survivor. At the same time, I have great compassion for those who don't survive in life. My heart has been broken many times by people I loved who couldn't find a way. And I don't know what the difference is, what gives some people the strength to go on. I can only be in awe and wonder that certain people have it." He continued, "And these plays, I feel, are about change, unexpected, unasked for, unwanted, but to be faced and dealt with or else we sink into despair or a hopeless longing for a life that is gone."

These themes of survival, change, and struggle in a small Texas community during the early twentieth century are universal expressions of the human condition at any time and in any place. Most importantly, 1918 displays the faith and renewal of the human spirit in steadfast people who journey through life.

ABOUT THE PLAYWRIGHT
A fifth-generation Texan, Horton Foote is deservedly considered his state's most important playwright and one of America's outstanding stage and screen writers. His first produced play, Texas Town, was mounted in 1941, and he first made it to Broadway in 1944 with Only the Heart. Three additional plays were seen on Broadway in the early '50s. Work in films and television followed: Foote won Oscars for To Kill A Mockingbird ("Best Screen Adaptation") and Tender Mercies ("Best Original Screenplay"), and a nomination for Trip to Bountiful, which began as a television play, moved to the stage, and then to film. During the 1970's, Foote focused on his monumental nine-play series, Orphan's Home Cycle, which includes 1918, Lily Dale, The Widow Claire, and Convicts. Five of the nine plays have been filmed. Widow Claire is currently in pre-production with Robert Altman directing and Horton's daughter, Hallie Foote, producing. In 1995, Foote won a Pulitzer Prize for Young Man from Atlanta. In the past three years, Houston's Alley Theatre has staged Young Man from Atlanta, Carpetbagger's Children, and Trip to Bountiful.
