A LETTER FROM THE PRODUCER

I would like to take this opportunity to welcome you to our 2006 Summer Repertory Season. With these three productions (Bonjour, Là, Bonjour; A Cheever Evening; and The Beauty Queen of Leenane) we invite you to join us in an international adventure into three cultures: first, that of a French Canadian family; then the fast-changing American culture of White Anglo-Saxon Protestants following World War II; and, finally, to the shores of Ireland and the Mountains of Connemara.

Theatre is a platform for the telling of great stories, and we come together to celebrate the art of storytelling--to exercise our powers of empathy and emotional range by understanding three different worlds but a humanity that binds us all. Hopefully, your imagination will be stretched, your mind challenged, and your emotions touched. We are delighted that you have joined us in the adventure of live theatre.

ABOUT THE PLAY

Michael Tremblay began his writings in an era of social upheaval during the '60s in his native Quebec, Canada, where French Canadian Nationalism was in full swing. Not only was there a call for modernization of life through urbanization, industrialization and the secularization of education, but there was also a call for a new theatre to raise consciousness and effect change. Tremblay's plays explore the elements of alienation, frustration and the inability to communicate set within the family unit, the workplace, and the arena of religion.

He considers Bonjour, Là, Bonjour a political play. Tremblay found deep trouble in the family life of his culture and dramatized these problems. However, Bonjour, Là, Bonjour is not alien to an American audience because it is easy to place the family in any American city, since some of the problems of this family are common across the cultural boundaries.

The structure of the play emphasizes the intrusive presence of "family" in everyone's life. There is no privacy because those not present are quickly informed by the others of what each person has said and done. The intertwined scenes capture the complex, entrapping web of family relations and obligations which pull each person in conflicting directions.

Acknowledged as French Canada's leading playwright, Tremblay has written over twenty plays, several novels and screenplays, and has adapted many plays into Quebecois, the Canadian French language.

ABOUT THE PLAY

John Cheever (1912-1982) was born in Quincy, Massachusetts, and was the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of seven collections of short stories and five novels. Shortly before his death in 1982 he was awarded the National Medal for Literature from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters. His novels and short stories chronicled the hidden anger, loneliness and anxieties of East Coast middle class Americans from post-war 1940s through the turbulent 1970s. Collectively, they present a portrait of a dying American aristocracy challenged by changing times. Some twenty of Cheever’s stories provide the raw material for A Cheever Evening.

Albert Ramsell (A.R.) Gurney, one of America’s most-produced playwrights, also writes primarily on the issues and foibles of middle-class America, which makes him the perfect dramatist for Cheever’s stories. His works (which include The Dining Room, The Cocktail Hour and Love Letters) have been produced on international theatre stages for more than 30 years and have garnered many awards, including a Drama Desk Award, a Rockefeller Award, and two Lucille Lortel Awards (one being for his body of work).

ABOUT THE PLAY

Martín McDonagh was born in London in 1971, to expatriate Irish parents. The Beauty Queen of Leenane is the first in his "Connemara Trilogy," which also includes A Skull in Connemara and The Lonesome West.

McDonagh's talent for turning "once upon a time" stories inside out and upside down developed early on, the result of his Irish-Catholic roots, an addiction to rock music, TV and films, and his own fevered imagination.

He and his brother, John Michael, chose to remain in London when their parents returned to the old family stomping ground in Galway. But the teenagers frequently visited the rural Irish county, and its storytelling tradition impressed Martin. He would later skewer its hapless inhabitants in a series of bitterly funny plays, starting with The Beauty Queen of Leenane.

During a lonely period in his late teens, he wrote 200 short stories, which he intended to fashion into a film titled 57 Tales of Sex and Violence. Only one was about sex, the rest were about violence.

The stories were generated in a hothouse of anger and alienation. Unemployed, the fledgling writer spent most of his day at the typewriter, when he wasn't watching Australian soap operas ("for the girls in the bikinis"). He spent a lot of time fighting over the most mundane matters with his brother, now a screenwriter (Ned Kelly); their explosive relationship would be chronicled by Martin in 1997 in his play The Lonesome West.

McDonagh has been resident playwright at the Royal National Theatre in London, and he has won numerous awards, including the Evening Standard Award for Most Promising Playwright, and four Tony Awards for The Beauty Queen of Leenane when it opened on Broadway.
