ENLIVEN YOUR SUMMER!

DRIVING MISS DAISY

Crimes of the Heart

Androcles and the Lion

W.M. TURNER AUDITORIUM
GRIFFITH FINE ARTS BUILDING
Stephen F. Austin State University

June 20 through July 12, 2008
Welcome to the SFA School of Theatre’s Summer Repertory season 2008. Because this is my first summer in Nacogdoches and my first time as producer of Summer Rep, it’s a special treat for me to greet you. Whichever production you’re attending, I hope it will be just the beginning of your Summer Rep experience. There’s probably a different but equally delightful play in our repertoire tomorrow or in just a few days.

Driving Miss Daisy is a winner in every way. As thought-provoking as it is about America’s changing experience of race, this is foremost a tender, sweet comedy about friendship. The play won the Pulitzer Prize for Drama, and the script also won an Academy Award for Alfred Uhry when he adapted his play for the big screen. That movie also won a Best Actress Oscar for Jessica Tandy in the title role, as well as the statuette for Best Picture.

Crimes of the Heart is also a Pulitzer Prize-winner and also made the leap to the movies. It too is food for thought, but it too is finally a heart-warming comedy, a zany celebration of family. On Broadway it was nominated for Tony Awards including Best Play, and the screenplay for the motion picture version, by playwright Beth Henley, earned an Oscar nod. If you’ve never seen a play in the Downstage Theatre, we hope you’ll join us in the MaGrath sisters’ kitchen for an intimate evening of laughter and tears.

Androcles and the Lion has been a favorite story for centuries, but Aurand Harris’s stage version infuses this suspenseful and moving tale anew with laughter and music. Slapstick humor in the timeless Commedia style brings the beloved fable to life for children of all ages, with songs to delight the entire family. Bring your kids or your grandkids, or come as you are and enjoy the audience as much as the performance. Is there any sound more beautiful than the laughter of children in summertime?

We also hope you’ll join us for the upcoming Mainstage Series, featuring Neil Simon’s comedy Brighton Beach Memoirs, the Broadway-hit musical Big River: The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, the moving drama The Elephant Man and yet another Pulitzer Prize-winning comic drama, The Heidi Chronicles. Don’t miss this year’s musical performances of The Original Cast, and join us in the Downstage for adventurous, cutting-edge fare directed by the best and brightest of our students.

In the meantime, thanks for enlivening your summer with a little live theatre. Enjoy.

PREFACE BY THE PLAYWRIGHT

There was a real Miss Daisy. She was a friend of my grandmother's in Atlanta, back in the forties when I was a child. She was a "maiden lady" as we called it then, the last of a big family, and she lived in what I remember as a spooky old Victorian house. There was a Hoke, too. He was the sometime bartender at our German-Jewish country club, and, I believe, he supplemented his income by bartending at private parties around town. And Boolie . . . well, I didn't really know him, but he was the brother of my dear Aunt Marjorie's friend Rosalie. They were real people, all right, but I have used only their names in creating the three characters in Driving Miss Daisy. I wanted to use names that seemed particular to the Atlanta I grew up in. The actual characters, though, are made of little bits and pieces of my childhood. Quite a bit of my grandmother, Lena Guthman Fox, and her four older sisters have gone into Miss Daisy herself. And I guess my mother, Alene Fox Uhry, is in there too. Hoke is based on my grandmother's chauffeur, Will Coleman, but also on Bill and Riley and Marvin and Pete and other black chauffeurs I knew in those days. And Boolie is so many pieces of so many men I know (including me, I suppose) that it would be hard for me to say what exactly comes from what.

When I wrote this play I never dreamed I would be writing an introduction to it because I never thought it would get this far. The original schedule was a five-week run at Playwrights Horizons, a New York nonprofit theatre, in the spring of 1987, and I made sure various family members from Atlanta would get to town during that period. The theatre seated seventy-four people. Just the right size, I thought, for a little play that could surely have appeal only to me, my family, and a few other southerners. To my amazement, the appeal was much wider. When the five weeks was up, the engagement was extended for another five weeks, and by then the demand for tickets was so great that we had to move to a bigger theatre.

Now there are several companies playing and many more productions planned in all parts of the world. I am in the process of writing the screenplay. I have won the Pulitzer Prize. Even as I write these words they seem unbelievable to me. When I wonder how all this happened (which I do a lot!) I can come up with only one answer. I wrote what I knew to be the truth and people have recognized it as such.

--Alfred Uhry, 1989

ABOUT THE PLAY

Beth Henley (1952- ) was born and raised in Jackson, Mississippi, and this background has found its way into her writing style and subject matter. She attended SMU in Dallas, studying acting, and while there wrote her first play, a one-act which was produced at SMU's Margo Jones Theatre in 1973. Moving to L.A. to pursue her acting career, she turned to playwriting when she found acting roles were scarce (her sole film role was as a "Bible pusher" in Jonathan Demme's 1984 comedy Swing Shift).

Her second completed play, called Crimes of Passion, was submitted by a friend to the 1979 Great American Play Contest at the Actors Theatre of Louisville, and won first prize and a production. Under its new title, Crimes of the Heart, the black comedy about three Mississippi sisters went on to make the rounds of American regional theatres before finally arriving Off-Broadway to great critical praise in 1980.

The following year, Henley became the first woman in over twenty years to receive the Pulitzer Prize in Drama, an honor made even more singular by being awarded before the play had moved to Broadway that fall. This, her first professionally produced full-length play, was also awarded the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for Best American Play of 1981 and was nominated for a Tony Award as Best Play in 1982.

In addition to her plays, Ms. Henley has also written the screenplays for Crimes of the Heart (1986; Oscar nomination), Miss Firecracker (1989), Nobody's Fool (1986), and was a co-writer of David Byrne's Talking Heads (1986).

Crimes of the Heart received its New York premiere at the Manhattan Theatre Club in 1980.

Produced on the Broadway stage by Warner Theatre Productions, Inc./Claire Nichtern, Mary Lea Johnson, Martin Richards, Francine Lefrak.

ABOUT THE PLAY

Aurand Harris (1915-1996) is America's most-produced children's theatre playwright. Born in Jamesport, Missouri, on July 4th, 1915, he attended the University of Kansas City, Northwestern and Columbia. He worked both as an elementary teacher and as playwright-in-residence at several U.S. universities, while producing a body of nearly sixty published stage works for children that covers a wide range of styles and subject matter, from adaptations of traditional stories and tales (Androcles and the Lion, Pocahontas, Rags to Riches, Yankee Doodle) to original plays that tackle once-taboo topics, including a child's reaction to death (The Arkansaw Bear).

Editor and publisher Orlin Corey wrote of Harris: "Aurand's plays hymn the joys of being American. . . . His plays recreate the joys of American small towns—from ice cream to personal freedom, the poems and characters of James Whitcomb Riley, the triumphant tales of Horatio Alger's all-American boys. To be sure, he also drew from old world sources, but it was his genius to make 'all-American' plays of them. Remember Androcles and the Lion, Punch and Judy, Monkey Magic? By artful Americanization he naturalized every one of them. He intuitively recognized that America is a land and reality of world-wide dreams and dreamers."

While Androcles is written in the style of Italian Commedia dell'Arte, using the stock characters and staging techniques of that 16th century theatrical form, the major message of the play--no man should be a slave, all are born free--is indeed purely "American." So our production sort of "Americanizes" the traditional lazzi, or comic stage business, of the stock characters in the play as well. Commedia actors developed well-polished routines to use in every play, what vaudeville comics would later call "shtick." If you look closely, you may see a little Three Stooges, a little Abbott & Costello, maybe even a little Will Farrell in our "shtick."

Androcles and the Lion premiered in 1963, at the 41st Street Theatre, New York City.

- This performance will be played without an intermission. -
